

Intensive properties introduction

An intensive property of a system is one whose value:

Answer: does not depend on the mass of the system, like temperature, pressure, etc.

Intensive properties are properties that are not dependent on the mass of the system, like pressure, and temperature. Specific properties are also intensive. The opposite are extensive properties. They depend on the mass of the system, like total energy, total volume, total entropy.