

How system change after a cycle

How do the properties of a system change compared to the initial state after it went through a cycle? Think about a piston-cylinder in a car for example.

Answer: All the properties are the same after a cycle

After a complete cycle, the temperature, volume and pressure return to the same values as they had before the cycle. In P-V or T-V diagrams this is easily seen.