

Defining system

How many properties of a system do we need in order to fully define it?

Answer: 2 intensive properties

The state postulate says that we only need 2 independent, intensive properties. Therefore, this answer is the closest to the correct definition with small traps around.