

THERMOQUIZ

Temperature of a gas

The temperature of a mono-atomic gas corresponds to:

Answer: The kinetic energy of the molecules.

The temperature of a gas is determined by the movement of the molecules. The faster they move the more kinetic energy they have, the higher the temperature.